

PERMISSIVE ACCESS

The permissive access land and footpaths provide access to land previously owned by the author, Derek Tangye, who wrote a series of autobiographical books based on his life farming at Dorminack. The land provides good views of the coast with its distinctive, complex field pattern. The numerous small fields were mainly created over the last two centuries in order to grow early vegetables and flowers. The high hedges provided shelter, which, along with mild weather, enabled very early crops to be grown.

This access has been provided under the Department for Environment, Food & Rural Affairs' farm conservation schemes as managed by Natural England, which help farmers and land managers protect and improve the countryside, its wildlife and history. It is permissive access and no new rights of way are being created. Existing rights of way are not affected. Please follow the Countryside Code and observe any other requirements shown above. Do not disturb wildlife, livestock or other visitors and in particular keep dogs under control. This is working farmland so please take care; people using this site do so at their own risk. Access ends on 31st July 2020.
